

List of 71 women political prisoners sentenced to execution or in danger of death sentence

Following the emergence of the “Woman, Life, Freedom” movement, executions, arbitrary detentions, and other serious human rights violations in Iran have intensified. Since December 28, 2025, when a new wave of mass protests began, reports have indicated a significant escalation in repression, including widespread arrests and the use of lethal force against demonstrators. On January 8 and 9, 2026, the regime in Iran carried out mass killings during the protests, with estimates of more than 30,000 people killed, alongside tens of thousands of reported arbitrary arrests.

Given the urgent nature of these cases, this list is provided to facilitate documentation, verification, advocacy, and efforts to prevent executions. The information is verified and updated as further details become available.

For information on ways to support individual prisoners and efforts to prevent their execution, including opportunities to become a political sponsor for a prisoner, please see the final page of this document.

Important Note Regarding This List

This document contains a partial list of political prisoners in Iran who have been sentenced to death or are at risk of receiving a death sentence. It is important to emphasize that this is not an exhaustive list.

Many families have been threatened by the regime in Iran and warned not to publicize information about their imprisoned loved ones. Due to the regime’s lack of transparency and the limited availability of reliable and official information, it is impossible to document the thousands of individuals who may have been subjected to politically motivated charges or allegations, including “Waging War Against God/Enmity Against God” (Moharebeh), “Baghi” (Armed Rebellion), “Corruption on Earth” (Efsad-e fel-Arz), and espionage—charges that can carry the death penalty.

The list below therefore represents a partial list of individuals who are currently on death row or are considered at risk of receiving the death penalty. Individuals identified as “risk of death sentence” are included because they have reportedly been subjected to charges that can carry the death penalty under the policies of the Islamic regime in Iran.

It is also important to recognize that political prisoners may face the risk of execution even when they have not been formally accused of conduct carrying the death penalty. In some cases, individuals may face severe punishment, including execution, simply because of their participation in protests or other acts of resistance. Therefore, the lives of political prisoners in Iran may be at risk regardless of the specific charges or allegations brought against them.

The information has been compiled from publicly available sources, including reports from families, human rights organizations, and other reliable sources. The information is subject to ongoing verification and may be updated as additional information becomes available.
