

Fourth Anniversary of "Woman, Life, Freedom":

A Call for Global Solidarity and Justice

On the fourth anniversary of the "Woman, Life, Freedom" movement, the human rights crisis in Iran remains dire. Thousands of protesters are currently held in inhumane conditions, enduring torture and medical neglect, with at least 260 political prisoners facing the imminent threat of execution. Despite this severe repression, domestic resistance continues. Following a call by a coalition of Iranian Kurdish political groups to mark the fourth anniversary of Mahsa Jina Amini's death and the dawn of the uprising, shopkeepers and business owners in several Kurdish-majority cities have joined a widespread general strike.

Amidst this severe repression, a critical step toward justice has been taken. We strongly welcome a new Amnesty International report that meticulously documents the regime's atrocities during the uprising and identifies 87 officials for criminal prosecution. This report serves as a vital tool in dismantling the regime's impunity and strengthening the global movement for accountability.

We urgently call on international organizations, institutions, and human rights defenders to use their platforms to stand with the Iranian people. We demand the immediate and unconditional release of all political prisoners, a total halt to executions, and the prosecution of those responsible for these crimes against humanity. The world must show the Islamic regime in Iran that it is watching.

Open Letter on the Fourth Anniversary of Woman-Life-Freedom

Four years after the death of Jina Mahsa Amini in state custody and the dawn of the Woman, Life, Freedom movement, the human rights crisis in Iran has reached a critical and deadly escalation. In the aftermath of the January 2026 protests, the Islamic regime reportedly arrested tens of thousands of individuals and killed at least 40,000 protesters. Caught between the threat of regional conflict and intensifying state repression, political prisoners remain uniquely vulnerable to torture, severe medical neglect, and lethal detention conditions. The Campaign to Free Political Prisoners in Iran (CFPPI) reports a sharp spike in ongoing arrests and state-sanctioned killings, with at least 260 political prisoners currently facing the imminent threat of the death penalty.

While international attention remains largely focused on negotiations between the US government and the Islamic regime, Iranian authorities are aggressively raiding homes and restricting internet access, acting with the assumption of total impunity. Building on the momentum of an August 2026 open letter published in The Guardian by prominent activists, the CFPPI is issuing an urgent appeal to global trade unions, student and women's rights organizations, academics, and legal professionals. CFPPI calls on the international community to mobilize their members, contact elected representatives, and issue public statements demanding the immediate and unconditional release of all political prisoners, a total halt to executions, and the complete abolition of the death penalty in Iran.

UN Fact-Finding Mission: Iran's Crackdown on 2026 Protests

Sara Hossain, Chair of the UN Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on Iran, has declared that the regime's violent suppression of the early 2026 protests constitutes crimes against humanity. The mission found that security forces deliberately fired on civilians and children, arrested the injured directly from hospitals, and systematically tortured detainees. While the Iranian government officially claims 3,038 were killed and 25,000 injured, the UN and independent rights groups stress the actual toll is significantly higher. Condemning the ongoing executions of protesters and widespread internet blackouts, the UN mission urgently demands an immediate end to these atrocities, independent investigations, and full accountability for all perpetrators.

"Be My Voice": A Young Iranian Student's Desperate Cry from Death Row

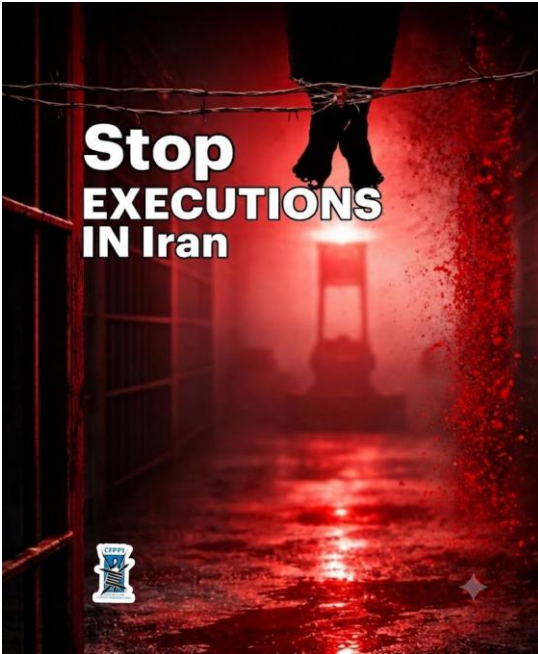

Najmeh Amini, a 23-year-old student and political prisoner sentenced to death in Iran, has released an audio plea from Vakilabad Prison urging the public and international human rights organizations to be her voice. Detained for over eight months, she was reportedly denied legal representation, subjected to an unfair trial, and pressured into making forced confessions. In the audio message, Najmeh says: "As long as I am alive, I have one hope: that before the rope becomes the end of my life, I will see my free and prosperous Iran." Let us be the voice of Najmeh Amini. We will not allow the voices of political prisoners to be silenced.

Three Brothers, Three Severe Sentences: The Boveiri Family's Plight in the Shadow of Execution

In the judicial case known as the "Martyrs Square of Isfahan," the devastating fate of three brothers, Mehrdad, Milad, and Ali Boveiri has remained largely overlooked. Following the January protests, Mehrdad Boveiri has been sentenced to death on charges of killing a security agent. His brothers were also handed severe punishments, with Milad Boveiri sentenced to 25 years in prison and Ali Boveiri sentenced to 5 years. Behind these heavy verdicts is a family enduring immense anxiety and fear for the future, prompting human rights advocates to urge the international community to amplify their voices.

"No to Execution Tuesdays" Campaign: Week 140 Reaches 62 Prisons

In its 140th week, the "No to Execution Tuesdays" campaign is conducting a mass hunger strike across 62 Iranian prisons to mark the fourth anniversary of the 2022 nationwide protests. Amid a surge in state violence that has seen at least 61 executions since late August, the regime is escalating its crackdown by issuing new death sentences, denying retrials, and pressing capital charges against recently detained protesters and students, including Alireza Sepahi, Arghavan Fallahi, and Mohammad Parsa Golchin. As domestic resistance continues with planned general strikes in Kurdistan, alongside global diaspora rallies across Europe, the campaign urgently calls on the UN Third Committee and Special Rapporteur Mai Sato to move beyond verbal condemnations and implement immediate, practical measures to halt the Islamic Republic's widespread use of the death penalty.

16-Year-Old Azhin Jandi Subjected to Torture for Forced Confession

According to recent reports, 16-year-old Azhin Jandi from the village of Koybar in Piranshahr is being subjected to severe pressure and torture by Iranian security forces to extract a forced confession regarding the murder of an Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) member. Intelligence agents reportedly raided his family home and detained the teenager without presenting any judicial warrant. Four days following his arbitrary arrest, Azhin Jandi's whereabouts remain completely unknown, and his family's repeated inquiries to local authorities have yielded no results, raising grave concerns about his safety and well-being in state custody.

Inhumane Conditions in Evin Prison's Ward 7

Recent reports indicate that Ward 7 of Evin Prison has reached a critical breaking point, plagued by extreme overcrowding, rampant disease, and systemic neglect. The ward's population has surged to nearly double its capacity following the mass transfer of financial prisoners from the Greater Tehran Penitentiary, a move executed without any expansion of living spaces or essential infrastructure.

The resulting conditions are life-threatening. Currently, approximately 170 prisoners are forced to share just seven toilets and seven showers. The facility is overrun with bedbug infestations, lacks basic disinfectants, and inmates are reportedly being given expired hygiene products. Furthermore, prisoners are subjected to abysmal food quality, severe medicine shortages, and the systematic denial of necessary medical transfers to outside hospitals. This suffering is compounded by failing cooling systems that blow hot air during summer months and a lack of functioning refrigerators.

Alarming, the basic legal principle of separating prisoners by crime category has been abandoned. A sophisticated drug distribution network now operates freely within the ward, reportedly facilitated by corrupt prison guards and collaborating inmates who smuggle narcotics into the facility.

The Campaign to Free Political Prisoners in Iran (CFPPI) expresses profound concern over this unfolding humanitarian disaster. The CFPPI urgently calls upon the UN Special Rapporteur on human rights in Iran and all international human rights organizations to intervene immediately. The regime in Iran must be held strictly accountable for ensuring the safety, dignity, and basic survival needs of all detainees in accordance with international human rights standards.
